I graduated with a medical degree from the University of Cambridge, UK in 1998, and trained to be an eye surgeon in London, UK. I am recognised as an Ophthalmologist (Eye Specialist) in the UK, Australia and Malaysia. After completing my specialist training, I decided to spend 2 more years of training in Cheltenham, UK followed by the Royal Perth Hospital, Western Australia, to sub-specialise as a retinal surgeon. After almost 18 years abroad studying and working in the UK and Australia, I returned to Malaysia in 2009 to practice as an Associate Professor of Ophthalmology and Consultant Ophthalmologist and Retinal Surgeon at the University of Malaya in Kuala Lumpur.
